

Present candidates your client can actually talk to.

Proxy turns a candidate's CV into an interactive career profile: a clean web page telling their story, plus an AI twin the hiring manager can question directly — before the interview.

THE PROBLEM WITH A SHORTLIST PDF

A CV attached to an email gets about six seconds. Then the same questions come back to you: "Tell me more about her stakeholder work." "Why did he leave X?" "Has she done this in banking?" Every round trip is a delay between your shortlist and a placement — and your candidate reads the silence as rejection.

WHAT YOUR CLIENT GETS

- Ask the profile questions in plain language and get answers drawn from the candidate's own verified input — not guesswork.
- Minutes of real engagement per candidate instead of a six-second skim.
- Better-informed interviews, fewer mismatched ones, faster yes or no.

WHAT YOUR AGENCY GETS

- A shortlist your client has never seen from a competitor.
- Fewer clarification round trips per role.
- A candidate experience that reflects well on you — candidates keep the profile for their own search.

WHAT IT TAKES — HONESTLY

This is not a bulk CV upload. Each profile is built from the candidate's CV plus roughly 30 minutes of guided input from the candidate — structured questions about what they actually did and owned. The AI does the assembly; the candidate approves the content; your consultant reviews before anything reaches a client. Good profiles take a little effort. That is exactly why they work.
